All people experience stress at some point in their lives whether related to job loss, becoming a new parent or supporting aging parents, finding housing, putting food on the table, finding assistance for emergency home repairs, or experiencing on-going issues like depression. Human services support people experiencing these types of stressors, so they can maintain well-being and quality of life. Communities are healthier and stronger when people have access to the services that they need.

A Supportive Community For All (SCFA) is a coalition of service providers looking to strengthen community connections and coordinate human services across the Snoqualmie Valley. Your feedback will be used to develop a Needs Assessment, which SCFA will use to determine how they can better support Health and Human Services over the next few years.
